“ Grandma i know that we had our differance but i know you loved me just as much as i loved you. Just want you to know that I miss you and i will always love you. To my family its time to put our differences to the side and start being there for one another. Life is to short for us not to be close like we should. Just want all yall to know that i love yall with all my heart and we all need to be strong for one another.

“ This is the voice I listened to the most and now it is silenced and I am wondering what will I do? On Nov. 28th she told me to listen harder I am still here for you, just ask God for the strength to move on. So that is what I am doing! It was a great 28 yrs with her and I will never forget her. I am happy knowing that she is in the presence of God. To my family, I love you! Granddad stay strong, have no regrets, know she loved you and you loved her. What more can you ask for in a marriage?
