“ The moment you began your journey my soul began to ache. It has not stopped since. I miss you so deeply. I wish I could have journeyed with you, But i would have rathered journeyed for you. I know one day I will understand why you had to go away. But for now, nothing means anything to me without you in my life. I still look at your clothes and your bedroom set and wonder why couldnt my precious Peanut be laying in his bed. So many women take a life so precious as a child for granted. If they knew the pain of a soul, they would cherish every moment with their children. I wish I could have slowed the time down. You were to precious for this world. Which says alot about you. You are truly an angel. And I pray that the devil and his followers will let you rest in peace and give your mom TaTeauna the space and strength to deal with you not being here. And understand that whenever a baby cries, looks, or smiles we wonder why couldnt it have been you smiling at us. I know you were going to make a difference in this city whether in life or death. Maybe your death will be a wake up call to others. That life is precious and cherish the moments you have cause we never know when its our time. Spend your time loving and encouraging not bringing one another down. Continue to give me strength and reason to stay here on this earth, otherwise bring me home with you. I love u from the Soul, Peanut.
