“ In memory of “Ty Lawson”. As young children we shared the same household, and the memories therin. As we got older we shared memories of penny candy, and tasty treats from Wallys corner store. As young juveniles we spoke of conquests that we knew would never be. As young men we talked and shared thoughts and memories of the “good ole days. Time brought to us children and a new reality, with new and more realistic conversations, yet the memories were but a conversation away. You heard the voice of our Lord say come to me. Now with teary eyes I think of you as more than a memory. I truly knew you as first family, Rest easy cousin, always in my heart. Respectfully submitted. John H. Clark
